Comment: This is regarding the city council wanting to be involved in the hiring and firing of city employees. As a resident of Charlotte, this appears to be a power grab by elected officials.

I have been a city employee for the City of Chino, CA, and the City of Grand Junction, CO and in both those cities never once did I have to meet with the City Council to determine my employment.

This City compared to the Cities I have worked for is run in away that sometimes baffles me; garbage isn't a contracted city service included with water bills, there is no true recreation department, festivals and recreation are down by outside volunteers and getting the community to rally around things can very difficult. As well as the lawn service, in that contract should include the removal of weeds from city sidewalks and such. These are a few things I have noticed in the three short years my husband and I have owned a home here.

The council shouldn't have the authority to be involved with employment, improve Charlotte, don't make it worse.
